The presentation was made by Brigadier General Garrison Davidson, the Seventh United States Army Engineer.

OPERATIONS DURING PERIOD

The operations of the Company during this period consisted almost solely of the transportation of Engineer materials from Army Dumps at Luneville, to Kaiserslautern, and thence to more advanced dumps successively at Walldurn, Wurzburg, Hall, Crailsheim, Goppingen, Ulm, and Donauworth,

These operations were distinctly hampered during the period by a lack of ordnance replacement parts for 2-1/2 ton trucks. Where an average of 50 trucks should have been kept on the road, it was only possible to keep about 40 in constant operation. At that, most of the major assemblies obtained, came from wrecked vehicles in Ordnance collecting points.

On the 5th of April, a River Reconnaissance was begun for the purpose of determining the possibility of transporting Engineer materials in River Barges from Worms, on the Rhine River northward to the confluence of the Main River with the Rhine, thence Eastward along the Main River to Bamberg. This reconnaissance was accomplished by one officer, a power Utility Boat Operator, a boat mechanic in a power utility boat. The reconnaissance clearly revealed that transportation on River Barges was impossible due to the large number of demolished bridges obstructing the River. The reconnaissance was concluded on the 19th of April, 1945.
